DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 11-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 11 recites the limitation "the heterodyne frequency of the first partial beam" in line 14. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being incomplete for omitting essential structural cooperative relationships of elements, such omission amounting to a gap between the necessary structural connections. See MPEP § 2172.01. The omitted structural cooperative relationships are: some sort of logical connection between the individual sections of the claim.

The claim as written makes it extremely difficult to follow what exactly is being claimed, as the wording jumps from the interferometer part of the apparatus to the measuring probe and back again with no clear way of knowing exactly what part of the invention is being discussed in the claim at any given point. This also makes it difficult to understand whether the interferometer or the measuring probe will carry out the means of the invention disclosed in the claims.

Furthermore, the claim discloses a shifting of a light beam to a heterodyne frequency. The use of a short time coherence light source prevents this, as the emitted light is held in a pre-determined band and cannot be adjusted from its original state.

Claim 11 recites the limitation "the unit" in line 28. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. What exactly is "the unit" referring to? It appears in this claim to be referring to the beam gun unit the way it is written, but could it not also refer to the interferometer, or something else completely?

Claim 14 recites the limitation "the unit" in line 2. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. What exactly is "the unit" referring to? Is it referring to the beam gun unit, or the interferometer, or something else completely?

Claim 15 recites the limitation "the unit" in line 2. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. What exactly is "the unit" referring to? Is it referring to the beam gun unit, or the interferometer, or something else completely?

Claim 18 recites the limitation "the unit" in line 6. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. As written, "the unit" alludes to the receiving unit that is supposed to be mounted in "the unit." Should "the unit" refer to another part of the device?

Claim 19 recites the limitation "the optical path difference" in line 5. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. "An optical path difference" is disclosed in line 4 of the claim, but is a different optical path difference than is alluded to in line 5. To what is "the optical path difference" referring?

Claim 20 recites the limitation "the unit" in lines 2 and 4. . There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. For line 2, as written, "the unit" alludes to the receiving unit that is supposed to be mounted in "the unit." Should "the unit" refer to another part of the device?

For line 4, what exactly is "the unit" referring to? Is it referring to the beam gun unit, or the interferometer, or something else completely?

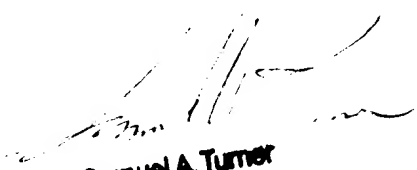

The claims are generally narrative and indefinite, failing to conform with current U.S. practice. They appear to be a literal translation into English from a foreign document and are replete with grammatical and idiomatic errors. As a result, the claims are more indefinite as a whole beyond what is described above, making it extremely difficult to interpret and understand exactly what is being claimed by the applicant.
